AIR FORCE INFORMATION WARFARE BATTLELAB

- 1. Mission. The Air Force Information Warfare Battlelab (AFIWB) rapidly identifies innovative and superior ways to plan and employ IW capabilities, influence development of Air Force doctrine and tactics, and organize and train forces to meet current and emerging Air Force missions.
- 2. Command. The AFIWB, located at Kelly Air Force Base, TX, is a subordinate unit of the Air Force Information Warfare Center (AFIWC). AFIWC is subordinate to the Air Intelligence Agency.
- 3. Responsibilities. The AFIWB:
  - 3.1. Solicits information warfare needs and solutions from Air Force operators and industry experts.
  - 3.2. Evaluates and prioritizes inputs, and recommends potential high payoff solutions for demonstration.
  - 3.3. Conducts tests of solutions, evaluates results, and presents results to AFIWC and Air Force Battlelab Planning Cell, as required.
  - 3.4. Communicates findings to the Air Force Requirements Oversight Committee and the Air Force Board for implementation or further study.
